Security = Peace of Mind!

Risks Associated with Windows Server 2003 End of Support and Older Servers

Security Breaches
• Security patches and updates for Windows Server 2003 will no longer be available.
• Data and intellectual property are at risk and older servers are more vulnerable to malicious attack.

Lack of Support
• Customers will no longer receive technical support from Microsoft in the event of a server problem.

Application Failure
• Applications are not recoverable if an operating system fails.
• Tools are not accessible to users so they cannot work

Compliance Issues
• Customers in regulated industries or handling regulated data could face fines or be cut off from key trading partners seeking to protect their own regulatory compliance status.
• The health care and payment card industries are also regulated and will encounter risk compliance issues.

Increased Operating Costs
• Older servers are more expensive to operate and maintain.
• They have higher failure rates, higher power consumption, more heat generation, and physically take up more space than the latest generation servers from Dell and Hewlett Packard

Don't wait until the last minute. AOS will be very busy upgrading our customer base to Server 2012. Get us involved now so we can upgrade you before the end of support date is here!
